Cancelling your booking after moving in

If you need to cancel your booking after moving in, you must discuss this with your Property Manager.

In the case that there is an exceptional circumstance causing you to withdraw from your accommodation, the Property Manager will ask for you to send them evidence to support your application to cancel.

An exceptional circumstance could be any of the following:

- Medical grounds
- Mental Health
- VISA issues
- Withdrawal from University (for a specific reason)

Please note, this list is not exhaustive and each application will be treated on a case by case basis. Dependent on the circumstance, your application to be released from your tenancy agreement is not guaranteed to be approved.

If you are applying to be released from your tenancy without an exceptional circumstance, you are likely to be held liable for your tenancy agreement. This will mean that you are responsible for paying any rental amounts due until you are able to find a replacement tenant. Almero Student does not take responsibility for sourcing replacement tenants.

Where a replacement tenant is found, you will be released from your contract as of the day that the new tenant's agreement begins.
